Raine Miller has been reading romance novels since she picked up that first book by Barbara Cartland. Rare and Precious Items (The Blackstone Case, #4). Her father, who was a lawyer, specialized in divorce proceedings, and Raine had to deal with family problems more than once, but Barbara Cartland's novels, as she believed, had the most beneficial effect on her. She was about to put the book back when her eyes fell on the last page of the cover. Raine quickly flipped through the book and found what she was looking for. She knew immediately that this was indeed her book. Her initials were on the title page.
