Interesting Sites Reverse Engineering the Things I've always admired famous engineers such as Steve Jobs, Bill Gates, Bob Taylor and Victor Lindholm but after reading their autobiographies, I've come to a conclusion that they are the luckiest men in the world. These famous engineers had a good success in their lives after they learned their field of expertise. Their success was not due to their strengths but because of their flaws, desire and luck. However, I am not the guy who can use a hammer and unscrew a normal screw. I always let a professional do the job. There are some professionals who do ordinary stuff. However, to detect the flaws in the design or to extract the contents of a device is very much different. Those who enjoy hacking gadgets are the guys who can look at the design and know how to undo it. The tricks that they use usually involve some soldering skills along with some chemistry knowledge. If you can't solder or you don't have an engineering knowledge, do not waste your time to buy or steal a gadget from someone else. Thankfully, nowadays there are many sellers who provide their own services for repairing the gadgets or for unlocking the contents. If you are not looking to do some time consuming work, which will take a lot of time to get your desired gadget, then simply go to websites such as My Gadget Fix, Gadgeteer, Giz Fix, Expert Auto, iFixit, iFixit and Gadget Junkie. These websites will provide you with the information regarding the parts of the device and information on how to repair it. However, if you are a hacker who likes to go all by yourself, then you will surely find some related instructions and information. One of the things that you will find out is how to take apart the gadget. If you are not familiar with soldering, you should look for a professional who can do it for you. If you are the guy who is good in soldering, then you can do it by yourself. However, remember that some of the soldering wires need to be tinned, especially if you are going to solder an integrated circuit.

Nowadays, there are many tutorials that teach people how to do solder work. You can start by looking at the videos of YouTube such as How to Solder and Solder Girls. You will find out the typical soldering work like soldering the wires, soldering
